A Tough Quartette. -

Charles Weingardner, Charles Smith, John

McGuire and Ted McGuire, a quartette of toughs, who have been for a short time the terror of the people residing along Cuming street, were finally run in by the police yes-terday. The charges brought against them are the larceny of a gold watch and two highway robberies, perpetrated on belated citizens in that quarter of the city. It is said that these fellows have been a source of infinite trouble to the police on that street for a long time, by their various devilish and criminal acts. Their latest exploit occurred

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb., 11.-[Correspondence of the BEE. |- A good deal of work for the teacher heroines has been done here during the past few days. Several subscriptions have been in circulation here and have been well signed. Last night McConhie post, G. A. R., held a camp fire for their benefit. The fighting chaplain, John Hogarth Lozier, was here. He is a whole circus with a campmeeting thrown in. Everybody was highly entertained, and the proceeds footed up handsomely. Other entertainments are being given for the same purpose, and when all is through Plattsmouth will not be behind in her liberal donations. We are pleased to see the grand work the Ben is doing in that cause, and hope it may result in raising a fund sufficient to place Miss Royce and little Lena Woebbecke beyond the reach of want.

Experience of the Fifteen-Year-Old Son of a Baptist Missionary in a Terrible Dakota Blizzard.

The Sad Narrative.

Rev. W. H. Swartz, who until recently has been in the employ of the Baptist Missionary society of New York, as a missionary in the neighborhood of Parkston, Dak., about five miles from which place his family reside, is in the city the guest of a brother-in-law, Mr. A. L. Frank, of 1214 South Thirty-fourth street. A BEE reporter called upon the reverend gentleman last evening to obtain from him the particulars of a son's experience and the anxiety of Mrs. Swartz during the terrible blizzard which swept over the west on the memorable January 12 last. Mr. Swartz was away from home at the time, but he permitted the reporter to copy the appended let-This contribution is toward the fund for the Westphalen girls monument collected by Hugh Patrick Delany, a boy of 11 years from the children of La Platte, Sarpy county school.

THE MOTHER'S LETTER.

My Dear Husband: You have doubtless learned ere this all about Arthur's sad experience in the terrible bilizard. But the facts have not all been told. After lying eighteen hours in his little sled he was so nearly frozen that he had to make a desperate effort to get out of the sled and onto his feet and when he reached the house, which fortunately was near where he lay, he fainted. The far a supposed he was dying, but they gave him some stimulants which revived him and then kindly prepared him something warm to eat and drink, and during the day he seemed to recover, but after toiling hard all day trying to save his team and ing hard all day trying to save his team and then losing them, as they were so badiy frozen, he was thrown into a fever and delirium. He raved piteously about his poor horses, did not know how we could do with-out a team, but fortunately we were able to out a team, but fortunately we were able to secure a doctor who gave him an opiate and he went to sleep. He seems quite well now, though weak. How grateful we are over his recovery. Oh, how near death's door he was. But how shall I describe my own suffering. It seems I have suffered more than our poor boy. I am almost prostrate. When the storm came up we knew he must be lost and all afternoon and night as the wind howled and the storm and cold intensified. The next day your brother started in search of him but the cold was so intense and the dis-tance he had to travel prevented his return that day. Oh! what weary hours. The next day while watching out for him we saw him coming through the fields alone without Arthur, without the team, and we knew something was wrong. Could it be that our boy was buried in the snow, cold in death! Oh, the suspense the anxitey of those moments. I thought I could not live till he reached the house. And I could not speak, I feared to open my lips or to hear him utter a word, but the children, you know how eager they would be and impatient. They gathered at the door pale and agitated and as soon as "uncle" was near enough, to be heard him coming through the fields alone without "uncle" was near enough, to be heard cried out, "Did you find him?" "Yes." "Is he alive?" "Yes." 'Oh, the burden that rolled from my poor heart, and as we learned that he had escaped with scarcely any injury at all you cannot imagine our joy. Surely we have many reasons for congratulation and thanksgiving to God. I felt so sorry to lose my poor "Dollie," but what is the loss of a horse when our dear boy is preserved to us! THE SON'S LETTER.

My Dear Father: You wish to know where I was lost in the storm and what my thoughts were when ¶ found myself lost. As you have heard I started for Parkston about 11 o'clock for some coal, and when about five miles out I was overtaken by the storm and in a few minutes the air grew yo dark with in a few minutes the air grew so dark with the driving snow I could not see the horses heads, and I was unable to see the road, so I dropped the lines and let them drift with the storm. In a little while they began flounder in the snow and stopped. I sup-posed I had got into a ravine but on examination I found I was in a corn field in five to six feet of snow. I got back into the sled again and tried to urge them through it, but in their plunging one of them threw his front leg over the pole and neck yoke. Then I knew it was all up with me, so I unhitched them and let them go. I then got into the sled, wrapped the robe around my feet and legs, put the quilt over my head and shoulders and laid down in the box and thought "Well, by God's help I have got this far, and by God's help I will get through," and in ten minutes I suppose I was sound asleep, was about I o'clock in the afternoon. dark I awoke. I raised up and looked out and the blizzard was just getting there, and I said "Well, this is all right, for it may be I will get through it all right, and may be I won't, so good bye to all, and oh, Lord, help me," and I laid down again. I did not feel afraid. I was not alarmed at all, and soon I was asleep again. About daylight I woke up. I was all right. I thought the snew had I was all right. I thought the snow had drifted over me and I did not feel cold, though I found presently that I was badly chilled and stiff. As I got out of the sled and attempted to walk I fell over. I got up and tried again, but no go. My legs were stiff and so numb I could not move them. I began to pound them and rub them, and by and by I got on my feet and as I started I. began to pound them and rub them, and by and by I got on my feet, and as I started I and by I got on my leet, and as I started I caught sight of the top of a house only about twenty-five rods away. I made for it, you bet, and after stumbling over four or five times I got to the door and woke up the family, and they helped me in. But as soon as they made a five and it began to grow warm I was seized with a terrible pain and things grew dark and I fell over on a chair. When I came to, the man gave me some stimulant, and it revived me, and when I got something to eat and drink I was all right, only a little weak. I guess I am the stuff they need out there. I ran into the mower once, you know, but the doctor managed to save my feet. Last summer I was in the barn when the cyclone blew it down, and now I have been eighteen hours in the worst blizzard that ever howled over Dakota or any other country. I am going to school now, and I expect somebody will hear of me some time. Your loving son, ARTHUR SWARTZ.

"AT SUNRISE IN THE MORNING." The Union Pacific Steals Its Way Up the Gas-Works Alley. Yesterday morning at 6:30 o'clock the Union Pacific massed about sixty laborers at the intersection of the alley between Jackson and Leavenworth streets with Eleventh street. The force was under the direction of Roadmaster Holbrook and immediately stretched ties and rails along the alley west from the east side of Eleventh street. Up to the latter point the track had already been laid and used for a couple of years by the Richardson Drug company and other heavy shippers on that thoroughfare. A short distance west of Eleventh street the workmen encountered opposition. They were ordered by some of the gas company's employes to lay no tracks in front of the property of the corporation which lies on both sides of the alley, on one side being the generating works and one large receiver and on the other the big receiver. The track layers, however, paid no attention to the orders and continued at work putting down ties, extending rails and spiking them with rapidity. The gas men then resorted to their hose and directed a heavy stream of water upon the railroad but that also was without effect. As soon as one gang got thoroughly saturated with water and then frozen with a coating of ice, another gang took its place. In this manner the track was extended past the works and out of the reach of the hose, after the men had been subjected to the latter for nearly forty minutes. About 8:30 o'clock the rails were laid in a very rough manner up to the east side of Thirteenth, and a line of platform cars for nearly the entire distance extended over them. Roadentire distance extended over them. Road-master Holbrook was like an ice man when he got through with his ducking, so much so that it was with difficulty that he took off his coat, and when he did it stood up as rigid and glossy as if it had been made of glass. He then dismissed his men to save them from colds. Besides the water, it is claimed that pace across the Sixteenth street viaduct. Frank Rush and Joe Rich, a couple of drunken fellows, were arrested last evening the gas employes threw several pieces of coal at the trackmen, striking on the back a man named Gorman, who resides on Thirteenth street, near the scene, and injuring him painfully. Another man had his ankle sprained and was taken to St. Joseph's bospital, whence he afterward left to go to Dr. Galbraith, the company's surgeon. Mr. Holbrook, it is claimed, was struck on the head with a chunk of coal and bruised.

Holbrook's gang was succeeded at about 10 o'clock by a smaller force of men under Foreman Carey, of the Bluffs, who put the finishing touches to the rough work of the morning. This over, Conductor Cassidy settled a string of cars over the line and the work was over.

A Beg reporter called upon the superintendent at the gas works and learned from him that the employes at the works had acted on their own authority, yet what they had done was heartily in accord with the feelings of the company. He considered the act an illegal one, and if he had been there be illegal one, and if he had been there he would, perhaps, have acted even more determinedly than the men did yet. The Union Pacific had no right in the alley and and their laying of track was wrong and should have been prevented by force. Mr. Pritchett, the attorney of the company, he said, had been notified of the affair and had said that the road in question had no right of way through the alley, and would in the morning take the steps necessary to oust it. Mr. Batton said the company was opposed to morning take the steps necessary to oust it.

Mr. Batton said the company was opposed to the track there because it closed the alley up to them. They could not unload there or drive team in or out without danger. Besides, it would interfere with their getting at their pipes as readily as required, and would shut off connection with them and their receiver when cars stood on the track. Again, there were places around their works near which they never used a light, and they had instructed their men never to go near them with a candle. used a light, and they had instructed their men never to go near them with a candle, lamp or match. These engines which would run up and down there, would be a danger to such places with their sparks, and might cause great loss of life and property. Mr. Batton, in conclusion, said that the company had no knowledge that the march was to be stolen by the Union Pacific until after the work had been commenced. He said how. work had been commenced. He said, how-ever, that a steal had not been entirely overlooked, because injunction papers had been made out some time and all that remained to be inserted before making application to the court was the time and place of the laying of

The K. of L. Social club will celebrate St Valentine's eve with a masquerade ball. Saloon keepers have fallen into line and are observing the 12 o'clock closing law with out a murmur. The police say so. Now the owner of the building rented by the council dont want to have the cellar used as a lock up, and won't sign a lease, but as the city has possession it's probable they will stay there. There were no arrests reported Saturday and Sunday, and the prespects are that Judge Reuther will observe Monday as a holiday. Business men on N street are rising to the emergency—or rather to the level of the readway. Bids are asked for by several of them to learn the cost of raising the respective buildings to a point where customers can see their shop windows without having to take a tumble of about seven feet to the sidewalk. Quite a number of convalescents will make their first appearance to-day. Councilman Geary has recovered from his recent attack of malaria, and O. E. Shannon, of the Hoof and Horn, is allowed to take an airing. John Mackey, who more than oncewas given up by the physicians, has also pulled through and will be around in a day or two.

The regular monthly meeting of this organization was held in St. Philomena's hall last evening. Mr. T. Fallon occupied the chair. Owing to the indisposition of the regular president of the league the entertain ment characteristic of these meetings was neglected, neverthless those present enjoyed themselves in discussing the present aspect of matters pertaining to the league. From the zeal and earnestness displayed by those present there is every reason to believe that there will soon be a very flourishing branch of the organization in this city. The next meeting will be held in the same place on the second Sunday of March at the usual hour. Several prominent speakers will be present

He Will Be Courteous Hereafter.

A Washington correspondent relates the following: The story of the little boy who picked up a pin in front of the wealthy merchant and was rewarded for his industry by a $1,200 clerkship, is now rather eclipsed by a recent incident in Postmaster General Dickinson's career. It happened after he had been appointed by the president and before he had been confirmed by the senate, during which period his status at the postoffice de-partment was rather doubtful. One afternoon, late, he was about to step into the side entrance when the zealous door-"Too late."

"But, by man, I have important busi-"Are you a member of congress?"

"Have you an order from a member?" "Can't get get in, then; too late,"

"Well, when can I get in?". "Dunno."

"Who can tell-" "Dunno, move on now."

It was then that Mr. Dickinson retired and entered by another door. The doorkeeper in the meantime pursued the even tenor of his ways, satisfied that he had done the right the right thing and vindicated the authority of the authority of the postmaster general Not long afterward he was astonished however, to receive an order to call on the new postmaster general, who had in the meantime been confirmed by the senate. His astonishment may be better imagined than described when he confronted in Mr. Dickinson the stranger whom he had treated so ungraciously. His new chief, though, proved magnanimous. "I didn't care anything for your dis-courtesy to me," he said, "but it might have hurt the feelings of a third-class Answer questions after postmaster. Answer questions this. That's what you're paid for.

A boy at Philadelphia dropped the rope of his sled into the slot of the cable and waited developments. Pretty soon the cable cought the rope and the small boy went whszzing along the street. It was great fun, until he reached the curve, and then the rope broke, and the sled and boy brought up against a lamppost, and the boy suffered most. At the hospital the young doctors patched up his nose, and reduced his dislocated wrist. "I had a dandy ride," he said, "but I never tought of de curve. Where's me sled?"

The Pacific Ocean boundary of the United Seates bas a greater extent of coast line than the Atlantic shore. The aggregate of our shore line of the Pacific is 12,734 miles, while on the Atlantic it is 11,800 miles, and on the Gulf of Mexico 6,843. It was the annexation of Alaska that promoted the Pacific coast to a higher figure than the Atlantic, Alaska having 9,830 miles of cost line. If the lake boundary is added it gives us a total coast line not very far short of twice the circumference of the earth.

MAt Halifax recently a perfectly formed egg, shell and all, about the size of a robin's egg, was found in the yolk of a hen's egg.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low cost, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. Royal Baking Powder Co., 126 Wall street, New York,

Remarkable for powerful sympathetic tone, pliable action and ab solute durability. 30 years record, the best guarantee of the excellence of these instruments,
